NETWORKS AND SOCIAL CAPITAL

LECTURER: ANDREOTTI ALBERTA ARGIA

CONTENTS

The course is structured into three parts and its overall objective is to highlight the importance of social relations and networks in socio-economic phenomena.

During the first part of the course, students will be introduced to the main theoretical traditions that, over time, have dealt with social networks in the study of economic and social phenomena. In particular, we will discuss the psycho-sociological school, the Anthropological School of Manchester, and the Harvard School (which developed the structural network analysis).

Over the second part, students will be presented the main methodological concepts for network analysis (dyad, triad, homophily, largeness, density, intermediation, etc.). According to the number of students, two lessons might take place in computer labs in order to practice and use Ucinet, the software for network analysis.

During the third part, we will analyse the concept of social capital and its relation with the concept of network (Coleman, Putnam, Burt, Lin). We will draw attention on the operationalisation of the concept and its application to the analysis of the labour market, enterprises, and local systems development.

TOURISM AND LOCAL DEVELOPMENT

LECTURER: MUGNANO SILVIA

CONTENTS

The aim of the course is to provide a theoretical and methodological framework about tourism and local development.

In the recent years tourism industry has registered positive growth comparing to other economic sectors and therefore it has become an economic and social developing strategies. This perspective needs to take into account an holistic approach which insists on the development dynamics and its positive and negative consequences on the social economic and environmental dimensions. A region, city or any local context is formed by a material and immaterial culture, natural resources etc and policies fostering tourism have the difficult task of synthesized this complexity.
